Lach L'cha!

By Rabbi Howard Mandell

The month of September constitutes a time of “new beginnings” for us Jews and for all Americans. It is a time when we transition from the hot and humid, vacation filled, and slower paced days of summer to the cooler days of fall, to a return to school and college, and to a busier, somewhat more stressful, routine.

The month of September constitutes a time of “new beginnings” for us Jews for a second, additional reason—the advent of the month of September and of the Hebrew month of Elul means that the High Holy Day Season is just around the corner.

The “new beginning” associated with the High Holy Days, however, is far different from the secular “new beginning” described above and shared by many Americans, in that the Jewish “new beginning” does not happen automatically with a change of seasons but requires a significant expenditure of time and effort on our part to achieve the “new beginning” for the coming year that we are seeking for ourselves.

Yet as one of the names for the High Holy Day Season, Yamim Noraim, “The Days of Awe,” connotes, the potential reward—the personal and spiritual transformation and resulting joy and meaning that can occur, when we begin to focus, not only on what is going on externally in our lives, but on what we are feeling and experiencing internally—is well worth the time and effort required to achieve this transformation.

It is, in fact, this potential for spiritual and personal transformation in our lives that serves as the ikar, “the essence” or “foundational piece” of the High Holy Day experience. To assist us in achieving this goal, and my primary reason for writing this letter is that our Tradition encourages us not to wait until Rosh Hashanah to begin preparing and laying the groundwork for this transformation, but to instead begin preparing for this during the month that we have just begun, the month of Elul, much in the same way that we are encouraged to prepare, in advance, for when we are going to leyn Torah or chant Haftarah or for any important meeting, event, or undertaking in our lives.

The reality is, however, that many of us, with all that we already have on our plates, with all the cooking and arrangements that need to be made for the Hagim, feel that we have no choice but to put our spiritual preparation for the Hagim on the back burner. This fact was recently confirmed for me by an old friend, who candidly acknowledged that, while she would like to invest more time in her spiritual growth and transformation this year, with all that she already has going on in her life with her job, her family, her communal life, etc., she seriously doubts, whether she has the wherewithal, the band-with, to even think about undertaking the “inner work” [heshbon hanefesh in Hebrew] needed to bring about the “new beginning” she wants for herself.

I thanked my friend for her candor and vulnerability and told her that I could even identify with much of what she had to say. I gently pointed out to her, however, that making perfection our goal is often the enemy of the good, and that whatever time she might be able to commit would go a long way in making her High Holy Day experience a more rewarding and meaningful one.

The thoughts and feelings that my friend described—feelings of being already overwhelmed and of not having adequate time to do the “inner work” needed—are similar, in nature, to the feelings I have heard expressed, in the past, by congregants, friends, and even my fellow and sister clergy, who spend so much of their time during the month of Elul focused on making the High Holy Day experience a meaningful one for those they serve.

Lach L'cha!

By Rabbi Howard Mandell

I would thus like to offer a suggestion or two for how all of us might utilize the month of September/Elul, without adding significantly to our existing stress and anxiety levels, to make our High Holy Day experience more rewarding and spiritually fulfilling. My first recommendation would be simply to reframe this “inner work,” not as a burden or added responsibility that is only going to add stress to an already busy life, but instead as a gift that we are giving to ourselves for the next month or 6 weeks.

This “inner work” can be done in a variety of different ways and settings. It can be done, while taking a walk or working out at home or at the gym, and rather than listening to music or books on tape or watching television, the time can be used to meditate, talk to God, or just be still and see what comes to mind. This “inner work” can be accomplished in a more formal way by carving out some time, each day, to meditate and/or to journal, asking ourselves questions, such as, “[W]hat is something that I did well this past year that I want to continue to do perhaps even better;” or “is there something about myself that I not pleased with and would thus like to change during the coming year?”

Once we have made headway developing this awareness, we are then ready to begin thinking about how to accomplish the growth and change we are seeking for ourselves. This can be done by talking with people we trust, reading books on the topic, journaling, seeking professional help, carving out time just for ourselves, and last but certainly not least, praying and communicating with God.

Our sacred texts make clear that God, in deciding, whether to create us humans with free will, was fully aware that we are going, from time to time, to fall short of the mark and thus let ourselves and God down. The fact that God still decided to create us with free will leaves no doubt, according to our Tradition, that neither God nor our Tradition expects us to be anything but fallible and imperfect.

What God does call upon us to do, however, again according to our Tradition, is to undertake the doing of teshuvah, “returning to our best selves,” by first acknowledging our wrongdoing to ourselves, and then reaching out to God and to anyone else, whom we may have hurt or harmed, and saying sincerely to them, “I am sorry,” and “I will do my best not to repeat this behavior again.”

Once we have done this, Judaism teaches that God will immediately forgive us, and for most hurt or harm we may have caused others, the onus shifts to the other person to forgive us.

Hopefully, if we begin the teshuvah process during the month of Elul, and have made significant strides in developing this self-awareness and in making amends to God and to others for our having short of the mark for the past year, we will have more time to spend during the High Holy Days focusing on the powerful words and music of the liturgy, on our own personal transformation, and on the joyful aspects of the Hagim—being with family and friends, eating the special High Holy Day foods, etc.

Undertaking the teshuvah process during the month of Elul thus results in a “win-win-win” situation: (1) we make our High Holy Day experience a more rewarding and meaningful one; (2) we are able to better bring about healing in and strengthen our relationships with ourselves, with the Almighty, and with our family and friends; and (3) we can gain the feeling of satisfaction and of peace that comes with our having taken responsibility for our behavior and for being back in sync with the divine and authentic parts of ourselves.

The aseret yemai teshuvah, the “Ten Days of Repentance” are now less than a month away. Paraphrasing the words of the great first century rabbi and sage, Hillel, “What better time than now,” during the month of Elul, to begin our High Holy Day spiritual preparation?

If there is anything that I can do to help make the teshuvah process easier and more rewarding and meaningful for you, please do not hesitate to let me know.

L'shanah tovah U'metukah!

My wishes for a sweet, joyful, and meaningful 5785 to your families and you!

MESSAGE OF THE MONTH FROM THE EXECUTIVE BOARD

By Jeff Tye

L'SHANAH TOVAH U'METUKHAH U'BRIAH

(TO A GOOD AND SWEET AND HEALTHY NEW YEAR)

I must admit that I had never heard the last part of the above greeting until I saw it in this quarter's new "Shalom" magazine that was just recently delivered to CBI (and other synagogues in Mass.) The magazine is free and available to anyone until they are gone. Feel free to take one when you are next at CBI. There are quite a few very good and thought-provoking essays in this edition that are well worth reading.

As I thought about the "Healthy" part of the greeting more, it dawned on me that without good personal and/or family health, it can make having a "good and sweet" year much more challenging – but not impossible! With a notable and easily documented significant rise in mental health issues since Covid, the wars in Ukraine and in Israel, and on college campuses around the world, it wasn't a big step to see how this aspect of health could also affect our view of a "good and sweet new year". Yet when challenges confront us, we are often given opportunities that allow for meaningful growth if we can only recognize them.

As Jews throughout the world prepare to enter 5785 in just a few short days, will the clarion call of the Shofar re-awaken the hopes that may be hidden deep inside of each of us to be able to help create that "good and sweet new year"? Will we find the resilience to face our challenges head-on and come out stronger for it? Will we as individuals make an impact in a positive way this year on ourselves, our families, our local, national and international communities? Many of our ancestors certainly did, even despite their human flaws. Our Jewish "cousins" in Israel seem to be reaching deeply into themselves and to each other and keep finding new ways to plant the seeds of resiliency in combating their significant challenges.

Here at CBI, you have been hearing about (and hopefully seeing) a number of physical improvements that have been made in our physical space. There are more to come in the near future. Many thanks to all have helped make them happen. Hopefully this also suggests to you that we are planning to be here for the long haul. With your generosity and a number of improvements in our overall financial picture that we have been able to create, we are on a path forward towards a "good and sweet new year"!

During the Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur services at CBI, you will hear from several of your fellow congregants about some of the different paths that they have taken to deepen their connection not only to CBI, but also to their Jewish roots. These are based on the 4 pillars/key values we identified several years ago with the help of our ESC consultants. If you have forgotten them, further explanations can be found on our CBI website under the category of "About" - "Our History and Key Values". These values are 1) Experience fulfilling, meaningful religious life; 2) Experience the joy of helping others; 3) Enrich your social life; and 4) Keep learning and growing. You may have noticed that much of our programming, services, and activities are geared towards impacting one or more of the above values. This is not just by chance, but by design as we strive to further build our special community here at CBI. We are so much more than just a "physical" building. We are individuals who come together in unity to create a greater good. Together, we can have an even greater impact on our personal and expanded communities.

MESSAGE OF THE MONTH FROM THE EXECUTIVE BOARD

By Jeff Tye

To that end, at our recent Board Meeting, we started an exercise on thinking about some potential ways we could do some innovating and keeping CBI relevant. In our brainstorming effort, several ideas percolated to the top. We will look at those ideas to see what can be implemented in a feasible manner. In like fashion, I would ask each of you to personally accept the challenge of continuing this brainstorming effort. If every member of CBI can suggest just one idea (more are certainly allowed and encouraged) of doing something differently or better, we can all be the beneficiaries of your forward thinking! If you have an idea, please send it to Janet in the office or to any Board member and ask that it to be considered. We can't guarantee that it will be implemented, but it may certainly lead us to think about an issue or concern or activity of which we might not have even been considering. If you feel more comfortable, we can also accept these ideas anonymously.

With that in mind, as President of the CBI Board of Directors, if we as your Board have wronged you in any way over the past year, please accept our apology. Let us know where we may have missed the mark and how we can remedy what hasn't been remedied yet. May 5785 be a year of resilience and taking on our challenges and creating new opportunities!

Please join the CBI Social Action Committee in fighting voter suppression!

Sunday, October 13 from 4:00 - 6:00 pm

With support from JALSA, the Jewish Alliance for Law and Social Action, CBI's Social Action Committee is hosting a postcard-writing event to help combat rampant voter suppression laws that have recently been enacted in several states. Our event will focus on Ohio, where new laws make it more difficult for college students, people with disabilities, and others to vote. The postcards will alert people to the new laws so they will be prepared to cast their votes and have them counted.

JALSA will provide the postcards, the wording, and names and addresses, and the Social Action Committee will provide snacks. Please RSVP so we know how many people to expect, and please bring 40-50 postcard stamps.

We hope to see you there!
